LOUIS E. PETERS
MEMORIAL SERVICE AWARD
REQUEST FOR NOMINATIONS
BUDDED 6/18/88

The FBI and the SOCIETY OF FORMER SPECIAL AGENTS (SFSA) of the FBI are preparing for the 1988 LOUIS E. PETERS MEMORIAL SERVICE AWARD. The award will be presented by Director William S. Sessions during the SFSA Convention, in Nashville, Tennessee, 10/29/88.

The LOU PETERS AWARD was first presented in 1982 as a way of paying tribute to Mr. Peters, a courageous man who gave the last years of his life in helping the FBI obtain evidence on the reputed head of an organized crime family. Now in its seventh year, the highest public service award is presented jointly by the FBI and the SFSA. The award annually recognizes an individual who has contributed to the FBI without thought of personal gain. Attached is a narrative of the LOUIS E. PETERS MEMORIAL SERVICE AWARD.

This year we are again seeking candidates who have helped the Bureau in a significant manner, and at great personal sacrifice. Through this award, the Bureau and the SFSA attempt to emphasize to the American public that they can make an impact through citizen cooperation. Year after year, the award winners have made this message clear.

You are encouraged to nominate at least one candidate for the 1988 award. The SAC and case Agent from the office that nominated the recipient should plan on attending the SFSA Convention and various social functions with the recipient, who is provided with travel, lodging and accommodation expenses for 3 days and 2 nights by the SFSA.

LOUIS E. PETERS

Lou Peters, a successful automobile dealer in Lodi, California, epitomized the American dream. He had a lovely wife, three beautiful daughters, and a plush home. He was secure, successful, and happy.

In June, 1977, Peters was approached by someone wishing to purchase his Cadillac dealership for two million dollars, about twice what it was worth. He learned that an organized crime family was interested in acquiring his business as a means of laundering their illegal funds. Peters came to the FBI, related the story, and offered to help in whatever way he could.

Right from the start, Peters recognized that he would be putting himself in a tenuous situation. So, in order to protect his family from threats and intimidation, violence and reprisal, he obtained a legal separation from his wife, [redacted]. Over a twenty-month period, Lou was able to secretly record statements made by Joseph Bonanno, Sr., and others which ultimately led to Bonanno's conviction on an obstruction of justice charge. Bonanno was one of the top organized crime figures in this country and had been untouched by the law enforcement for over thirty years. In January, 1981, Bonanno was sentenced to five years in prison, due in large part to the unselfish contributions made by Lou Peters.

The Lou Peters story certainly deserves a happy ending. He remarried his wife shortly after the trial. However, shortly after learning that he had terminal cancer, Lou Peters died on July 20, 1981.

Nine months earlier, William H. Webster, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, had presented Peters with an award which told the whole story: "To Lou Peters, who set new standards of patriotism, of unselfishness, and of valor, with the gratitude and respect of his FBI friends."

Before his death, Lou stated that he would do it again in a minute; it was the only right thing for him to do. "You either have a deep conviction for the community, your family, and your country - or you don't."

It is in this vein that the FBI, in conjunction with the Society of Former Special Agents of the FBI, has established the Louis E. Peters Memorial Service Award. The Award will be presented annually to that person who best exemplifies the standards set by Mr. Peters in providing service to the FBI and the Nation.

Dear Ron,

I enjoyed talking with you last monday. Best of luck to you in your career and happy holidays.

It's hard to believe that six years have past since I retired from the Bureau. Fortunately I've been associated with a first class operation, Paul Chamberlain International (brochures enclosed) for most of that time. We've seen PCI prosper and grow, despite the normal problems encountered by new start-up businesses. One fact is very clear to us, there was no way we could have succeeded without one most important dimension - our employment of highly motivated ex-FBI professionals, who have retained their integrity and keen investigative skills.

Your agents should know that they are a highly marketable commodity when they retire because of their training, experience, honesty, and past association with the Bureau.

I'd appreciate it if you'd let your agents, who are near retirement know about PCI. If they intend to do private investigative/consultant work, they may be interested in becoming associated with PCI. They would conduct investigations for us on a part-time basis in their geographical area at a $30.00 hourly rate plus expenses; or if they are former Special Agent accountants and white collar crime specialists with experience in financial crime investigations involving banks and savings and loans, they may consider working for us on our special task forces, such as we now have in Dallas, for $50.00 per hour plus expenses. (maybe the accountants were smarter than us regular agents all along).

It's PCI's policy to never conduct investigations for individuals or groups whose reputation or activities are contrary to the best interests of law enforcement and the U.S. Government.

We pay our investigators immediately upon receipt of their invoices - before we are paid by our client.

We expect to gradually open PCI branch offices in various locations throughout the United States and possibly abroad. We will need full-time managers to run those offices. (salary to be determined by variable factors)

If any of your retiring agents are interested they can call me at 1-800-227-4421, and/or send their resume to me at the address listed below.

If you or any of your retiring agents are in Los Angeles on business or pleasure, please accept our invitation to visit the office, see our operation and meet our people.

PCI appreciates being in a position to offer this opportunity to the finest people to be found anywhere in the world - FBI Agents.
